A Work-dream Which Now Has Chance to Come True

There Are Many Boys and Girls Who Need but a Little Lift to Win Success.

By FRANCIS SHAFER.

When, a day or so ago, Clarence Van Nestrand, an eighteen-year-old youth of Glen Cove, Long Island, went to his work in a leather factory at the hour of 7 o'clock in the morning, he did not guess that something was to happen to make it possible for a long-cherished dream to come true.

His mother is a widow, with two other children, and as an eight-year-old boy he started out as a bread-winner. For ten years he worked in the mill, all the while wishing that in time he might become a mechanical engineer.

He did not see much light or hope ahead, and the other morning when he put on his leather apron to go to work he expected to do it for many more mornings and years to come.

Courageous Rescue.

It happened more than a year ago on the mill pond.

The children had been skating on the ice, when they struck a thin piece and all three of them fell through. And when the fourth, a thirteen-year-old girl, went to their assistance, she, too, came to grief, and all were floundering about in the icy water as the ice promptly life-saver came by. It was not easy work, for the firm ice was pretty far away, and four benumbed children were no slight burden to handle, by only a boy at that. But he got three to safety, and then, when he began to think, as he put it, that it would soon be "all up" with him and the youngest boy, two men threw out a rope to the boy and both were helped ashore.

And there the story ended, at least, the young rescuer thought it had ended. But it must have traveled until it reached the commission, for last September a stranger appeared in Glen Cove and asked the boy "a lot of questions."

And nothing more happened until the other morning when the award was announced.

What It May Mean.

A bronze medal and $1,000. Apart from the recognition, and not considered as an award, that is not much money to change the current of a human life. But if the $1,000 proves sufficient to make the young hero's work-dream come true, it will be a mighty sum, indeed.

The boy hopes to use it to help him in the study of mechanics, for the ambition to become a mechanical engineer has lighted up many a gray morning when he tied his leather apron about him and went to work in the mill. He knows he cannot graduate from an engineering school unless he has a vast sum that he is ready to work on the side, satisfied to do anything if at the last he can proclaim himself a mechanical engineer.

When a boy starts in to work at eight years old and takes his dream with him from play to work, it really seems that it ought to come true in the end, particularly when he proves himself a hero. And one believes that of all the ways men and women take to make their money yield as well as it can, there are not many that are much farther reaching than the helping along of modest work-dreams. Because it makes a world of difference whether one starts to work in the morning with mind and hands in tune with the task or dreadingly, unsympathetically ties a leather apron about him and works in the mountainous, uninteresting refrain of "must."

And sometimes, many times, boys and girls might be started along the line of their natural dreams if there was some one to give them a lift at the time when a lift would count.

RIBBON-TRIMMED CHALLIS.

A challis in which red berries played an important part in the design, was made up simply as shown in this sketch and trimmed in an attractive way with red satin ribbon.

Small black buttons decorate the front, and a black enameled leather belt is worn.

OLD-TIME FOOTSTOOL RETURNS TO FAVOR

Colonial Designs of Various Sorts Lead in Popularity.

What is it, a desire for comfort or woman's vanity, that accounts for the increasing popularity of the footstool? Certainly we are a comfort-loving people; formality and stiffness repel us. Certainly to the dainty footwear of womanhood seeks a means to show itself, and where can this be so well accomplished as on one of these footstools, which are in themselves works of art? At all events these luxurious necessities of our grandmothers have apparently come back to stay.

Footstools always have been made in the various French periods of furniture, for France is the home of the modern footstool, and no room furnished in any of the historic French styles would be complete without accompanying footstool. But within the last year or so footstools have been demanded for use with every sort of furniture, and today the best dealers meet this demand with a bewildering assortment.

These present-day footstools are not the small doll-like articles which gave pleasure to our grandmothers. They are stately pieces of furniture, most of them twelve by eighteen inches square perhaps, and they stand from eight to twelve inches from the floor. Some, to be sure, are smaller, perhaps eight inches wide, a foot long and four or five inches above the floor. These generally have little arms or handles at the ends, and can be easily carried from place to place.

The Colonial Footstool.

Colonial designs of various sorts seem to take the lead in popularity. Excepting in formal drawing rooms it is unusual to have the footstools designed with special reference to the rest of the furniture, but a mahogany footstool in any room where mahogany furniture is used.

One of the most serviceable footstools is shown with a mahogany frame in straight, simple lines, with red, brown, or green leather cushion. Tapestry in various dull hues and upholstery of other sorts in colors that would blend with the color scheme of almost any living room are also used to cover the cushions of these useful footstools.

A very comfortable design is the inclined footstool. The full mahogany frame, covered with a cushion two or three inches thick, is only an inch or so from the floor in front. The back is perhaps eight inches from the floor, so that the top of the footstool is fixed at a slant that would admirably bring rest to the weary foot.

Small Virginia colonial mahogany footstools with bulging ends, which suggest the horsehair sofas of our Virginia ancestors, if we are fortunate enough to have any, are especially suitable to rooms furnished with old American colonial furniture.

The Old English Stool.

An attractive footstool for use in a room not necessarily colonial in design is a reproduction from an old English piece of furniture. The legs are thin and spindling, and are connected with rounds. The top is a sort of braided rush. The stool stands about a foot high.

Little stools which suggest old-fashioned hassocks also are made of upholstery stuffs mounted on wooden frames of bases. Some of these are tufted with a button in the middle, some are almost cushionlike in their softness, and some have the rectangular form. These occasional footstools are especially attractive.

Uses for Old Papers.

Save old newspapers. They may be used as a great time-saver and prevention of disorder. When peeling apples, potatoes, etc., drop peelings on a newspaper, when through, you can easily clear your table.

In winter time, in places where bathing by the stove is necessary, always place newspapers under and all around the tub to keep the matting or carpet from getting wet.

When sewing, spread newspapers under and around your chair and the machine, and when you have finished, gather up scraps, threads, etc., in the pattern.

Fish Balls.

Pick enough salt codfish into small bits to make two cups. Put a quart of potatoes, pared and cut in quarters, into a saucepan, lay the fish on and pour on plenty of boiling water. Cook until the potato is tender, then drain and mash smooth in the same pan. Add a level tablespoon of butter, a dash of pepper, and cool partly; then add two well-beaten eggs. Have the deep fat for frying smoking hot, and fry the balls until crisp and brown. Shape the balls with a tablespoon.

Turn out, cut in thick slices; put two slices in each ramekin, with a little grated cheese between and one tablespoonful on top. Set in a hot oven until the cheese is melted. Remove from the oven and in each ramekin pour a little highly seasoned tomato sauce. Cook for less time when the cheese is melted. The Hanoverian steaks are little ham-burger patties, broiled and well seasoned. A tomato sauce may be served with them.

BIG AMERICAN REVIEW FOR LONDON MUSIC HALL

Alfred Butt is planning to present a big American review at the London Palace Music Hall this spring, and one of the objects of his present trip to this country is to make arrangements for such an event.

Mr. Butt is an enthusiastic admirer of the Winter Garden reviews in New York, and he has been trying to induce Ned Wayburn to run over to London to stage his production for the Palace.

Score 150 for "Delphine."

When "Oh! Oh! Delphine" is transferred to the New Amsterdam Theater, New York, to-morrow night the official scorekeeper for Klaw & Erlanger will tally 150 performances beside his name. Just to prove that he is able to bear up under the double burden of excessive royalties and excessive whippers, Ivan Caryll, the composer, will conduct.

Removes Grease.

An excellent mixture to remove grease spots from clothing is made of four parts alcohol to one part of ammonia, and about half as much ether as ammonia. Apply the liquid to the spot and then rub with a sponge and clear water.

Paint the Ball.

Paint one-half of your darning ball white, the other half black; darn black stockings over the white end, and vice versa, and you will have no trouble seeing the threads.

CHARMING AND GIRLISH.

This is a very becoming frock for the young girl and is one that can be made at home without the least difficulty. The dress closes at the back and has separate guimpes. The design is especially suitable for bordered goods.

The pattern, No. 6091, is cut in sizes 12, 14, and 16 years. Medium size requires 4-1/2 yards of 44-inch bordered goods for dress and 3-1/2 of a yard of 36-inch material and 5-1/2 of a yard of 25-inch net for guimpes.

The above pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the pattern department of The Washington Herald.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS ABOUT HOUSECLOTHES

One-piece Dress that May Be Washed Separately—Other Timely Information.

Women who have had experience know that waists and skirts are hard to keep together when doing housework. Dressing sacks and wrappers do not appeal to neat women, and one-piece dresses are hard to wash and iron.

To solve the problem make the waist any style liked and finish all but the bottom, try on, draw a band around the waist at the waist line, and arrange the fullness. Pin the band in place, take off and stitch the band exactly as pinned. Finish the bottom of band with a piece of heading.

Make the skirt any style you like and finish the top of skirt band with heading. Lace skirt and waist bands together and you have a one-piece dress that can be washed and ironed separately. As the waist will much more quickly than the skirt, it is well to have two waists of the same material.

The average woman likes pretty corset-covers, but knows they are short lived, even when made of the best material. A simple way to utilize the trimming for the life of two covers is to base on to the old cover some insertion, any suitable width desired, on a line above all worn parts. Stitch solid to the upper part and cut off lower part at the margin of insertion, allowing for a small hem.

Take the remainder of the old cover and spread out to use for pattern on new material. Hem this at the top and sew to lower edge of insertion. When this is done you have practically a new cover made even prettier than the old, because of the inserting, and it will wear as long as a new one, with a cost of 15 or 25 cents.

WANTS $5 FOR PENNY.

New York Boy Sends One to Treasury for Payment.

A New York boy sent to the Treasurer of the United States yesterday a 1909 Lincoln penny containing the initials "V. D. R."—that of the designer—and asked that he be given $5 for it, the amount he said he had heard the government was giving for this issue of the new penny.

The pennies bearing the sculptor's initials were not recalled, but, as the result of criticism on the ground of free advertising for the sculptor, the die was changed and the initials were left off. Treasurer Thompson explained that although collectors may be offering premiums for that coin, the government was not. He sent the coin back to the boy.

Indorses Health Bureau.

Unqualified indorsement of the Owen bill, creating a national bureau of health, was pledged by the Washington State Federation of Women's Clubs and the Pacific Federation of Women's Clubs in the Senate yesterday. Senator Jones of Washington presented telegrams from 1,000 women in support of the measure.

ENDEAVOR SOCIETY MEETS.

Henry Holmes Makes Address at Calvary Baptist Church.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Calvary Baptist Church met last night, and after transacting business, enjoyed a banquet in the Parish Hall. There were about 100 members and guests present. Henry Holmes, president of the District Christian Endeavor Union, made the principal address. He declared that Christian Endeavor work was doing much good among both the young and old, not only in the District, but wherever it existed. The toastmaster was George B. Fraser.

President Receives a Quill.

President Taft yesterday added to his collection of curious gifts received during his administration a red, white, and blue quill, made of 536 pieces, which reached the White House to-day from S. H. Read, Merna, Neb. Read inclosed a short note to the President, begging him to accept the gift as a token of appreciation from one of the old soldiers, "who owed so much to the President."

A $750 CONOVER BABY GRAND PIANO

PURCHASED FROM

Percy S. Foster

PIANOS, MUSIC AND VICTOR TALKING MACHINES

Foster Building 1330 G St. N. W.

ANY ONE MAY COMPETE FOR THIS SPECIAL AWARD

Not limited to Herald contestants, but all votes must be cast for some contestant.

After careful investigation and comparison of values, The Advocate purchased four $750 Conover Baby Grand Pianos from Percy S. Foster, to be given as contest awards.

Feeling satisfied that he had made a selection that would win the unanimous approval of contestants, it was natural that when it came to offering a special award, his choice would again fall on one of these artistic instruments.

The Conover Baby Grand is one of the world's finest small pianos. It is a masterpiece of construction, perfect in tone, and charming in design. The length is 5 feet inches—an ideal size. Strings, felt, keys, and other musical parts are of highest quality.

It has a magnificent mahogany case, and is finished in the most artistic manner.

The Conover Baby Grand is indorsed by famous musicians everywhere.
